

Analysis of the Relation between Climate Change and Human rights Law

Project manager: Dr. Seyed Ziaeddin Madani

Abstract

The research work titled Analysis of the Relation between Climate Change and Human rights Law deals mainly with the possible links being established between climate change and the issue of human rights law in order for the both to be able to provide more mechanisms for human beings against harmful and negative impacts of the climate change on their life. The study reached a few findings namely that the two above-mentioned issued are mutually interacted and effected through one another's facts and norms. In other words, not only human rights law is influenced (i.e. breached) by the climate change harmful impacts resulted from human manipulations in its natural status, but climate change norms, rules and regulations are as well interacted by the human rights law.

Keywords

Public International Law, Law of the Sea, Climate change, Human rights law.